Glen Rosa to be fenced off

Hugh Boag

euitoi @arraribaririer.co.uk

A plan to fence off a large area of Glen Rosa as part of a major conservation project has been unveiled.

The National Trust for Scotland is discussing the proposals with community groups on the island in a bid to let as many people as possible have their say.

Under the plans, which have yet to receive final approval, 400 hectares of the glen would be ringed with a new electric fence to allow replanting in the glen, which has been overgrazed for many years by deer and sheep.

However, the fence, which would be split-level, would be low in height to make it as unobtrusive as possible. It would also mean that the three small enclosures in Glen Rosa, where tree planting was started 15 years ago, could be opened up again.

The plan would cost the trust in the region of £150,000, which would be paid for by funding from the players of People's Postcode Lottery, who will contribute £116,000, and the Leslie Wheeldon Bequest.

If final permissions are granted from the landowners, including Arran Estates and the Foresty Commission, work on the fence could start in August, with tree planting over the winter months.

'This project is all about conservation. We have no intention of spoiling the vistas'

However, head ranger at Brodick Castle and Country Park, Kate Sampson gave the assurance: 'This project is all about conservation. We have no intention of spoiling the vistas and views in the glen by planting wall-to-wall trees.'

Indeed, only 40 hectares of the 400-hectare site will be planted with trees native to Arran – mainly upland birch, but also hazel, aspen and whitebeam.

These will be planted in areas where there is 'good

These are the friendly faces who will be bolstering the numbers of police officers on Arran over the summer.

Having already started duties last month, the additional police officers are on secondment on the island until the end of October.

PC Dani McMonagle, who is usually stationed at Hamilton, applied for the secondment to experience island policing to further develop her abilities and skills.

Maryhill-based PC Craig Parker said: 'Having been involved in urban and city policing for eight years as a community-based officer, the opportunity to work on Arran is an exciting development opportunity.'

For PC Robert Lambie, who is usually stationed at Loch Lomond, Arran is familiar territory. 'Having holidayed on the island on numerous occasions, this posting will allow me to give something back to the community that has given me so many nice memories,' he said.

Owing to the vagaries of shift patterns and other police commitments, PC Gary McLaggan from Fife is also on secondment but was unable to be photographed with his colleagues.

Arran gets own ward but faces loss of councillor

North Ayrshire Council has warned Arran could have less representation than at present after the historic Islands Bill was passed last week, writes Hugh Boag.

For while the island will now be able to have its own ward, it will consist of only one elected member – one fewer than the two who the live on the island now, although they also represent Ardrossan.

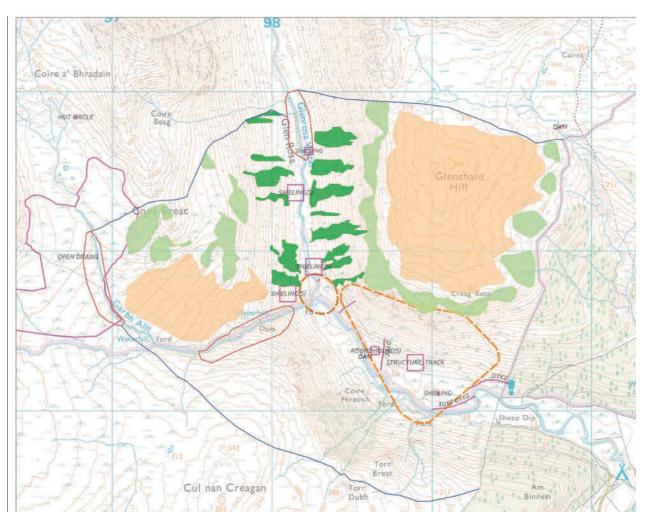

The council was contesting the equity rule – which originates back to the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 – and requires there to be the same number of voters per councillor across an individual local authority area.

Councillor Cullinane said: 'We're very disappointed that they are not amending the parity policy. This is wrong – a one-size-fits-all policy should not apply to North Ayrshire.

'How can they apply the same rules to Arran and Cumbrae to the rest of North Ayrshire? The number of electorate to councillors should be weighted differently.'

Arran has a 2017 electoral role of 3,878 and forms part of the three-member Ardrossan and Arran Ward.

A ratio is set for each local authority, which for North Ayrshire, is 3,000 voters per member.

evidence' there would have been trees in the past and are shown in dark green on the diagram (above). Areas of scrub will also be planted with juniper and the like, and there will be extensive restoration of the peat hags and bogs.

A lot of survey work has been carried out in relation to birds, vegetation and insects, and one section of the glen, below Glenshant Hill, will be left just as it is – as it is a 'priority' area for the winchat, adders, a minotaur beetle and a number of archaeological sites.

Kate told the Banner. 'We are aware this is a significant part of Arran, but we want to recover some of the island's lost landscape.

'That is why we are talking to as many people as possible during the engagement stage.

'We also want to get as many volunteers as possible to help us with the tree planting, including children from the schools.

'We want people to feel they are part of the project and a good way of doing that is to help plant the trees.'

Kate said that from a walker's perspective, the three present fence enclosures would be replaced by one fence line which would be kept as unobtrusive as possible. She also said there would be a number of access points along the fence and that she was talking to walkers and was open to suggestions over where these should be. The electric fence will be powered by solar panels.

'It will be less intrustive than what is there just now,' she added.

The fence would be 'temporary' in nature but, given the slow nature of tree growing, that would mean it would be in place for around 30 years.

Perfect storm causes a gridlock in Brodick

There were growing calls the car ticket kiosk at the cars won't block the main this week for an urgent solution to be found after Brodick was left gridlocked last Saturday by ferry traffic.

Cancellations and fog delays to the ferries, which lasted most of the morning, saw huge queues of cars, bikes, motorhomes and vans along the shorefront as far along as the Book and Card Centre.

And it was not only ferry traffic caught up in the queues but cars and other vehicles trying to head for Lamlash and further south. Traffic coming from the Co-op and other businesses also faced lengthy delays as police tried to help clear the road.

Much of the blame was levelled at the position of new ferry terminal. This was questioned as being too near the main road even before the ferry terminal was built.

Since the terminal opened there have been several instances of cars spilling on to the main road, but Saturday's incident was the worse drivers, and those going about their business in Brodick, had seen.

Many residents took to social media to vent their frustration as well as trying to come up with a solution. 'They should swap the entrance and the exit for the ferry, bad design fault,' was one suggestion.

Another said: 'Just wondering if they could move the queue into Market Road when it's busy, so road?

Caledonian MacBrayne blamed a 'perfect storm' of circumstances for causing the long traffic queues. A spokesman said: 'It was a combination of one sailing being delayed due to the fog so two sailings worth of traffic arrived at the same time and the fact that there were temporary traffic lights 25m south of the port entrance which compounded the situation.'

The Banner contacted North Ayrshire Council but it said ferry traffic management was the responsibility of CalMac in liaison with Police Scotland.

Arran police sergeant Dougie Robertson said: 'Police Scotland received two calls regarding the

'Several factors combining resulted in the tailback, which was cleared as quickly as possible.'

The mid-market hotel would have 97 rooms which could accommodate more than 300 000 visitors a year and would create 30 to 40 full- and part-time jobs. But the hotel would have just 52 car parking

As well as objections to the size and design of the building, the Arran Civic Trust has parking concerns for residents and staff.

In its planning submission the Trust says: 'This is a prestige site and deserving of a building that fits the culture and history of Arran, rather than the flat block idea which will dominate the Brodick seafront.

'The very principle of introducing such an outsized project into the village character of Brodick is flawed from the outset. It seems likely, although not conceded by the developer, that the market sought for the proposed accommodation is the group visit driven by coach trips and escorted tour parties.

'This approach to mass tourism has not been endorsed as the constructive future for the island.

'It is suggested that at the very least this proposal should be put before a full planning committee meeting so that the implications of progressing with this scheme as presently constituted are fully debated by elected members of the planning committee.'

The VisitArran submission has been made collectively by the board which tells planners: 'The existing building of the McLaren Hotel has deteriorated. and there is obviously a will to have the site developed to improve the visual appearance of the Brodick

'It is obvious that any hotel will need to get the right number of rooms to attract the necessary return on investment.

'However, it has to be said that VisitArran believes that this site cannot take a 97-bedroom hotel, restaurant and bar, and that all other issues flow from this; size and scale, staff accommodation, parking and the limited amenity offered by small room size. If this issue was addressed, it would transform perceived negative comments to positive support for the proposal, which is where we would all like to be.

'Sadly, if the plans remain set as it is, we cannot support the application.'

Arran Community Council has stated 'that this application should be carefully considered against the current Local Development Plan and, in particular, the policy which states that any development should be of a scale and character which is not detrimental to the amenity and landscape of the area

'Given the standard of the drawings currently supplied with the application, we feel that we are unable to support the application at this stage. We are also aware that other local groups have submitted representations to which we broadly agree and support.'

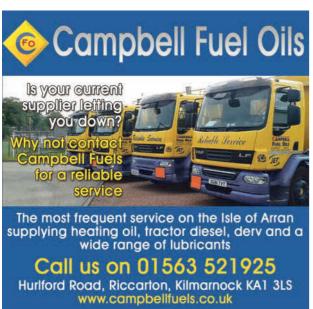

In its design statement the AbodeGroup argues: 'There is a mix of Victorian traditional and post-war/ modern buildings within the proposal site and the immediate surroundings dominated by the later.

'This results in quite a varied architectural display and is especially so with regards to the existing site and the two modern developments to each boundary. These two buildings are quite noticeably "different" to better examples of local design.'

Arran top hotels scoop major awards – again

Arran has sailed away with two of the top honours at Scotland's most prestigious awards ceremony for hospitality, tourism and catering, writes Hugh Boag.

Both the Douglas Hotel and the Auchrannie picked up awards in the 15th year of the Catering Scotland (CIS) Excellence Awards.

The Douglas Hotel was named best independent hotel at a packed gala dinner in Glasgow last Thursday night, attended by more than 500 of the country's leading hoteliers, caterers, chefs, colleges and suppliers, ahead of Dunstane House in Edinburgh's West End and the Lovat

Loch Ness, at Fort Augus-

Judges said: 'The standard of customer service set the Douglas apart. It looks after each guest from the front door onwards. The fabric of the hotel is first class, it takes care to involve the local community and there's a lovely diversity to the food from the bistro to the restaurant.'

The Auchrannie was the winner of the training and employee retention award.

The lifetime achievement award was presented to Ayrshire hoteliers Bill and Cath Costley, said by the judges to have created 'one of the greatest business success stories in Scotland'. Their establishments include Highgrove House and Lochgreen House in Troon, the Brig o' Doon Hotel in Alloway, and Ellisland Hotel in Ayr.

Brodick's traffic troubles

Brodick is not known for its traffic jams. Indeed, despite the island being much busier with cars than it once was, gridlock is not often a word associated with Arran

Well, last Saturday morning was to prove that a 'perfect storm' of circumstances can bring Brodick to a standstill.

But while fog cancelled ferries and the temporary traffic lights on Brodick hill, may have contributed to the mayhem - it was not the root cause. That, in our opinion, is the fact that the car ticket booth is far too close to the main road.

This was being said even before the new terminal was built and since the ticket office began operating, while the old pier was still in use, there have been a number of occasions when cars have been queued out along the main road. Sometimes in the early morning this has been blamed on the ticket booth not being opened soon enough, but there have been other occasions as well.

We believe that what is now needed is for CalMac, North Ayrshire Council and the police to come up with a solution to stop a repeat of last week's gridlock, or it will happen again.

Thought for the week

'Rejoice in the Lord always; again I will say, rejoice. Let your reasonableness be known to everyone. The Lord is at hand; do not be anxious about anything, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known to God. And the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus.' Philippians 4:4

Arran Banner letters special

The planning application for the proposed demolition of McLaren Hotel in Brodick and erection of new hotel and restaurant has sparked a major debate. Here are just some of the individual objections which have been submitted to North Ayrshire Council planners.

Monday June 4

Sir,

- I object to these plans in their present form for the following reasons:
- 1. Too large for the plot, overly tall, and does not suit the architecture of Arran with its flat roof and faux sandstone facing.
- 2. Inadequate parking.
- 3. Inadequate accommodation for housekeeping, restaurant staff and I ask the planners not be fluffed off with suggestions that staff accommodation will be built or pur-
- 4. This is one of the prime sites on Arran. This is not Largs in a large urban setting but an island community.
- 5. Several hotels on Arran are closing, changing their use, often to holiday flats or up for sale. Further, Altachorvie in Lamlash with many rooms and chalets wishes to be classed as urban rather than countryside with a wish to build up to 10 homes on the site. This suggests hotels are less of a financial proposition on Arran than previously, unless they offer additional facilities. The larger hotels such as Auchrannie Resort and Kinloch Hotel in Blackwaterfoot, have these additional facilities, be they swimming pools, beauty centres, fitness facilities or general spa and leisure facilities, gyms and even play barns. This proposition has nothing of this sort and apparently will rely on cheap group travel.
- 6. Airbnb is changing the island, and how individuals are booking rooms. There are now 125 Airbnb places on Arran. Since, increasingly, people bring their cars because of the cheapness of RET, reaching accommodation is less problematic than in previous years and not public transport dependent when visitors are on the island.

This must be considered when looking at the economic projections for this huge hotel. Airbnb is changing tourism, whether it is good for long-term viability of the island or not.

What it does mean is less accommodation available for those actually working on the island, except in slack winter times, when staff are often laid off from employment and land up in expensive and damp holiday lets for a few months before having to leave again.

So what might be alternative options for this site?

It would seem to me that what might work is a boutique hotel, with a small number of rooms and high-end market set-up. Perhaps with a maximum of 25-30 rooms. A prestigious addition in design to Brodick.

There is, however, an urgent need for relative low-cost, small flat, rented accommodation to house staff of many types appointed to the island to keep services viable and operational: care staff, nurses, teachers, social workers and other professional staff, including doctors, or police on the island might make a sound financial proposition for these developers.

Not to be sold as a speculative development, but to be earmarked for those providing medical, social and teaching services to islanders of all ages. There is an increasing need for such flats. The viability of Arran as a viable residential proposition is reaching a critical point. Are we to be a holiday only island with fewer and fewer islanders resident 24/7?

Without these critical support staff across many NAC functions including social care, home care and education, North Ayrshire and Arran NHS, including nurses, doctors, ambulance staff and ancillary staff supporting the hospital, islanders will be forced to leave.

The planners of NAC and the executive team in the Economy and Communities function must think beyond numbers of tourists and economy, economy, economy. Quality of environment, sustainability and the social networks of the communities are vital ingredients to the future of Arran. Numbers of 'tourist beds' is a lousy way to measure success. Should planning considerations be dictated by previous use of this site permission? Should it only be contingent on the capacity and physical size of the existing McLaren Hotel building being retained? It is, however, hoped that any developers should have more imagination than that.

Friday June 1

I wish to oppose the proposed plan on the following grounds

Too tall. Four storeys is taller than any other hotel on the island and not in keeping with the seafront in Brodick

Too large. A previous application for a development of apartments on this site was refused. That proposal was for a wider, but shallower, development which did not project as far towards the seafront as this plan.

Not in keeping with other developments on the seafront. It is more in keeping with a large, mainland, town or city.

Lack of staff accommodation for the 30-40 staff.

Currently there are always appeals from hoteliers and businesses for accommodation for their staff members, so where will these staff members stay?

Lack of parking. Ninetyseven rooms, plus staff and restaurant diners, will generate more vehicular traffic on the already congested front. Whilst not every room will have residents arriving by car, a high percentage will have arrived by vehicle in order that they can further explore the island at their leisure.

Thus the parking spaces proposed would appear to be inadequate. Further, the parking on the front is usually packed with the cars of locals, workers, visitors from elsewhere on the island visiting Brodick, and with the cars of locals who, unable to get their car booked on the boat, have left their car and gone as foot passengers. There will not be the space available for the overspill of residents' cars, staff cars and cars used by visitors to the restaurant, assuming it is open to the public.

Whilst sure the company has done its market research and looked into the financial viability of this hotel, if it fails to give cognisance to the difficulty of recruiting, and retaining, staff then the Arran community and Brodick in particular. will be left with, potentially, a much larger eyesore in the future; not what one wants visitors to the have as their first impression of the island.

I am all in favour of the site being regenerated but do not think just anything should be accepted as an alternative to the current eyesore.

Visitors come to Arran, and islands in general, because their architecture, villages and townships are different from their experiences on the mainland.

Why try to build something 'mainland' when 'island' is what is being sought out by visitors?

Perhaps a smaller building more in keeping with the nature and ambiance of Brodick seafront is more acceptable.

Friday May 11

Sir,

I support this application to demolish the current eyesore and replace it with a the proposed building. Not only will this return this street to looking less run down but it will provide much needed accommodation on the island to complement the increase ferry traffic. It will also bring more direct employment and investment to the island which will trickle down to many other businesses on the island helping to sustain the island

Dougarie gardens open day

Since 1931, Scotland's Garden Scheme has been raising money for charities by opening gardens of horticultural interest throughout Scotland. Many of the gardens are privately owned and therefore not usually open to the public.

This year, for the 35th vear, Dougarie Lodge gardens will be open on Tuesday July 3 between 2pm and 5pm. There will be teas in the 19th-century boathouse and stalls.

Sixty per cent of the funds raised at the garden openings goes to charities of the garden owner's choice, which will be Pirnmill Village Association, whilst 40 per cent is shared between Maggie's Cancer Care Centres, the Queen's Nursing Institute and the National Trust for Scotland gardens fund and Perennial.

Everyone is welcome to go and enjoy the gardens and support these charities.

An unattended slipway; tickets are bought on board this seasonal ferry. Don't be fooled: the ferry is a busy one, a vital step in the hopscotch between Arran and Islay for tourists and a welcome mile-saver for local businesses.

Did you know that you can get your hearing tested easily?

And it's absolutely free at Specsavers!

Our ears are amazing things - helping us to hear everything from birdsong to a glorious brass band in full swing. But hearing can often be taken for granted and many of us don't realise that over time our hearing can deteriorate, so things don't sound as sharp and clear as they used to.

Hearing loss is surprisingly common, with current estimates suggesting that it affects around 1 in 6 in the UK*. Of course, the loss usually happens quite gradually and a lot of the time you don't notice it yourself. Often it is friends or family who realise you might be having issues before you yourself become aware of it.

So what are the tell-tale signs that we should look out for? The usual ones are things like having the TV turned up so loud that others find it uncomfortable and keep asking you to turn it down, or you having to ask people to repeat themselves frequently and thinking that people are mumbling a lot, particularly in noisy pubs or restaurants.

Specsavers recommend that anyone over the age of 55 should have regular hearing checks. It is really easy and completely free from Specsavers Audiologists. You can even do it at home in the first instance using the Specsavers free hearing check app or on-line hearing test. If it turns out after your in-store hearing test that you have some hearing loss Specsavers will be able to help and advise you.

There's often a misconception around the size of hearing aids but the reality is that they come in a whole range of fitting styles that can be very small and discreet. It's incredible actually, considering the level of technology and features packed into such tiny devices. Specsavers Audiologists have all the latest hearing aids including ones that are rechargable, made from titanium and essentially invisible to others. They can even be controlled through a smartphone.

To find out more or to book a free hearing test, call 0800 023 2920 or visit specsavers.co.uk/hearing.

Historical Society visits Hutton's Unconformity

Arran Historical Society members recently enjoyed a guided tour of Hutton's Unconformity during a field trip to Lochranza which was attended by 24 members, writes Hugh Brown.

Meeting at the Lochranza Field Centre on a bright spring day, the guides directed the group along the shore, stopping on the way to see the metamorphic rocks of Dalriadian age. These were formed approximately 500 million years ago.

The action of heat, immense energy and pressure had distorted the original flat-bedded sedimentary rocks causing twisting and distortion originally form-

Robin's Supper Club opens

Chef Robin Gray, well known for his salad leaves and herbs which he grows on the island, has now opened up a restaurant at Lamlash Golf Club called Robin's Supper Club.

Robin is passionate about using local produce and what he is unable to grow or rear himself he gets from local sources, including the goat for his delicious goat curry. Robin's menu also includes locally sourced squat lobster and lamb, his home-made burgers and falafel burgers and fish and chips.

Robin will also be serving Blackwater Bakehouse bread along with his very own, extremely tasty home-grown salad leaves and vegetables.

ing mountains which are now eroded.

Members then continued round to Hutton's Unconformity where they saw Devonian age sandstone on top of Cambrian age metamorphic rocks. The unconformity was explained to the group: 'The Cambrian rock was eroded for approximately 150 million years before the Devonian sandstone was deposited. The dip of the Cambrian rock is now steep. The Devonian rock was laid down as a horizontal bed over this but now has a slight dip down toward the sea.3

James Hutton was one of the fathers of geology who observed the feature when he came to Arran in the 18th century. He observed a similar unconformity feature in East Lothian near his home. He was a farmer and observed soil being washed away off the land into rivers and eventually into the sea and deposited. He postulated that such a process had deposited sedimentary rock. He realised this took a long time and therefore the age of the Earth was much older than the religious authorities had decreed. It was very controversial for the time as it put him at odds with the religious establishment.

Society members returned to field centre for a complimentary lunch and a collection was taken for the formation of new paths for the Arran Geopark. They thanked everyone at the centre for making their visit an enjoyable and informative one and for showing them around the new geology room.

The next meeting of the society will be in Brodick Hall on Monday July 16 where Fiona Laing will talk about the history of the village of Pirnmill. This is a change as the advertised speaker, Dr Clare Ellis, who is unable to attend.

THE ARRAN BANNER 20 YEARS AGO

Saturday May 30, 1998

Down memory lane

David Ross of Hawick made a recent trip down memory lane by visiting Holy Isle, where his grandfather, also David, had been a tenant farmer in the 1930s.

Travelling over to the island earlier this month, the Buddhists had shown David his former home and that had triggered his memories as a young boy living off the coast of Arran. Although too young himself, his big cousins attended school in Lamlash and they had to stay on the 'mainland' all week, coming home only on the weekend. Young David would sail over with his grandparents to the Old Pier Shed market in Lamlash to sell the produce they had grown on their farm and to buy the basics of flour, salt, oatmeal which they needed to complete their normal diet of goats' meat, rabbit and fish.

Arran call up

Gordon McIlwham, whose parents own a chalet in Brodick, received his first Scotland rugby cap on Tuesday. A regular visitor to Arran and occasional player for Arran Rugby Football Club, his wife was in Brodick when he was told of his call-up. Unfortunately, the chalet in Brodick has no telephone so friends and family passed on the good news to let his family know of his first cap.

Gordon, who is a full-time professional with Glasgow Hawks, was called to the team to replace front row player David Hilton. He may not, however, remember his first full Scotland appearance with much fondness as the Scots lost the match 52-26 to Fiji in Suva.

Millennium assistance

Lochranza hall is to be knocked down and rebuilt. This was voted almost unanimously at a meeting in the hall last Monday. Called to discuss the future of the hall, only two people were in favour of repair out of a total of 62. Previously, a questionnaire had been sent around houses and eight had voted for repair out of 111 responses.

Ideas of knocking the hall down and starting again came as a result of its poor condition and the availability of millennium grants. A new hall is expected to cost around £300,000 plus £100,000 for additional cost.

The village would have to raise 10 per cent of this. Outline planning permission would have to be sought by September and, to gain financial assistance, the project would have to be completed by September 2000.

three wins in succession to go seven up only for Jamie Stewart to win the next three. Unfortunately, he then miscued an iron at the 8th, leaving him unable to match Jamie Macpherson's up and down for a par four.

With nine to play, Jamie Stewart was five down and with a mountain to climb and despite him winning the 12th with a fine birdie three, the match ended with a concession on the 13th green for a comprehensive victory, and his third club championship, to Jamie Macpherson. It's fair to say that, as with many matches, the contest was closer than the six and five score might suggest but the new champion's short game, always a strong point with him, was especially good on the day. Congratulations to the new club champion on his victory and to both finalists on the sporting and friendly manner in which the match was played. Thanks to the small band of supporters who turned up and to John and Louise in the clubhouse for the catering and refreshments, superb as always. Last but by no means least, grateful thanks to Stewart and James for their hard work over the past few days getting the course, especially the greens, back into shape after the hot dry spell of weather; an amazing turnaround considering the conditions they faced just a week or so ago.

An athlete from London will be undertaking an epic 300-mile cycle during three consecutive days of cycling around Arran next week in order to fulfil a childhood pledge to his grandfather.

Nathan Burge, 24, is not only undertaking the cycling challenge but is also competing in marathons, sponsored skydives and various other fundraising events as part of his yearlong campaign to raise money for Cancer Research UK.

At the age of 9, after his grandfather passed away from an asbestos related cancer, Nathan pledged that he would cycle around Arran to honour his grandfather and raise money in his name. He will start on Monday (June 11) and will be circumnavigating the island roughly six times in just three days.

He has also issued an open invitation to any local cyclists and cycling groups on Arran to join him on some of the route, which he says will be a massive help to keep him going.

Fresh from competing in Europe's Toughest Mudder Challenge earlier in May, Nathan will also be attempting the London to Brighton Bike Ride during June, the Kilimanjaro Challenge in September and is currently rescheduling a 10,000foot sky dive after his last attempt was hampered by poor weather.

ing out a 1,500m swim, a 40km bike ride – taking in the loop at Kildonan – and finishing with a 10km run. First female back was Jemma McNeill in 2.15.01.

The final race of the day for the adults was the sprint distance, which saw local participation from mother and son Carole and Myles Johnson as both finished with loud cheers from the local supporters. The winners of this event were Craig Armour (male, 1.08.24) and Suzie Drummond (female, 1.12.56).

After watching and waiting all day, the junior triathletes were ready to enter the sea and start their aquathlon races. With ideal swimming conditions, the young triathletes were off and ready to show their open water swimming and running skills.

The final podium places for the day went to Tristar 1 Rhea Webster (female, 11.03), Joseph Greening (male, 11.21). Tristar 2 Ruaridh Lindsay-Smith (male, 17:34) and Abby Stewart (female, 20:46). Tristar 3 and youth Matthew Ross (male, 28:11,09) and Alexandra Ross (female, 28:13,85).

Feedback from the event has been fantastic with one competitor saying: 'My first triathlon and you really made it a special day for me in fantastic scenery. Arran is beautiful.' Club coach Craig Wood said: 'All of this would not have been possible without the amazing support from so many businesses across the island, the local residents and the dedicated volunteers who stayed all day to ensure that the event ran safely.

Thank you

'The club would like to take this opportunity to say a huge thank you to all supporters, including the Big Co-op Brodick, The Old Byre Showroom, Arran Outdoor Centre, Auchrannie Resort, Machrie Tearoom, the Pierhead Tavern, James of Arran, the Lagg Hotel, Velo Café and Arran Kayak Club.

'There are so many more people to thank and we'll be coming to see you soon with a personal thank you, only this time we might just have to leave the wetsuits, bikes and trainers as we steadily prepare for the Scottish National Junior Triathlon at Bellahouston Park on Saturday June 16. Thank you again to all Arran residents and businesses for your continued support.'

The club is currently looking for new junior members to join their fun and free sessions. If you would like more details of our training times and locations, please contact Craig Wood at craig.wood10@ yahoo.com
