ACHA flat is bad for our health says tenant

by Colin Cameron editor@argyllshireadvertiser.co.uk

Damp in a rented flat has forced a Lochgilphead tenant to throw out mouldy items and she also claims it is damaging her own and her son's health.

Shona Murray, aged 40 and originally from the Isle of Mull, says that her shoes, clothing and bedding have become so mould-covered in her flat on Lochnell Street that she has had to throw out items that were otherwise perfectly good.

She said: 'An ACHA official came round to have a look and they told me it was down to condensation. All they had to say was "have you got your vents open?" It's just ridiculous.

She and her 14-year-old son James and Frankie, a pug/ Border terrier cross, moved into the Argyll Community Housing Association (ACHA) two-bedroomed flat in February.

It was, she says, damp from the moment she moved in. You can smell it as soon as you walk in,' she says.

James' bedroom is particularly badly affected, with mould growing on the underside of divan drawers under his bed.

'James suffers from asthma, and it has definitely got worse since we moved here,' claimed

A tenant of ACHA for many years on Mull, she feels disappointed at her experiences in Lochgilphead. 'I am a good tenant,' said Shona, 'I don't miss rent payments and I don't owe them anything."

Suffering from fibromyalgia and a degenerative spinal condition, Shona maintains that just the fact of talking about her situation harms her health. 'Speaking about it gives me headaches, my heart races and I get sweats. It's just

She concluded: 'James' asthma is only going to get worse, and I don't want to be here through the winter.'

ACHA chief executive Alastair MacGregor responded: 'The association identified a small area of damp. We inspected the roof and carried out some lead work to the skew.

'The small area affected had to have the plaster removed to allow it to dry. The area was tested last week and when inspected it was dry so arrangements are now being made to re-plaster the wall. There are no other signs of water penetration in the flat.

'The property has been re-rendered and no dampness was identified when the property was re-let.'

Mr MacGregor added: 'The association has located dampness data loggers to double check if there are any other issues. The results of this will be known shortly and if there is any evidence of further dampness we will take appropriate action.'

Lochgilphead house plan is thrown out

Plans for a new house to be built in Lochgilphead town centre have been thrown out by council chiefs.

The proposals for the three-bedroom building on land at the rear of 57 Argyll Street were refused by Argyll and Bute Council's planning department.

Three complaints had been submitted to the authority, which deemed the application by John MacVicar unsuitable due to the size of the site.

John Peace Associates, representing Mr MacVicar, had previously said in a design and access statement that the proposed house would preserve privacy between Argyll Street houses and the Stag Park.

The council's head of development and economic growth, Fergus Murray, said in a report on the handling of the application: 'By reason of the limited size of the application site in combination with the development pattern in the immediate locality and the scale and siting of the proposed three-bedroom house, [the planned house] would result in an over-intensive form of backland development.

'[This would be] with an unsatisfactory relationship with adjoining development to the detriment of the visual amenities of the locality and the residential amenities, [and] the occupiers of existing adjoining development in terms of loss of privacy, visual dominance and intensification of activity, noise and disturbance.

'The proposed intensification of built development within an historic plot layout and the insensitively sited and over-intensive development of a traditional back court open space which forms part of the setting of frontage development, would be out of keeping with the traditional pattern of built development.

'[It would also be] to the detriment of the character and appearance of the Lochgilphead Conservation Area.'

The planning and access statement said that the proposed house would only be visible to neighbouring properties.

'Very, very good' was the verdict of Brendan O'Hara as he spent a day with Lochgilphead's finest.

The Argyll and Bute Member of Parliament met civilian staff and police officers as well as spending a day out on the beat with PC Neil MacLeod.

'I really enjoyed it,' said Mr O'Hara at the end of his shift. 'It gives me an insight into just what officers do, and the interaction between the police and other agencies.

Inspector McLeish said: 'It was good to give him an insight into local issues and what we do to help keep people safe. He certainly seemed to enjoy being out on patrol.'

Council apology after dead whales left for three weeks

by Colin Cameron editor@argyllshireadvertiser.co.uk

Argyll and Bute Council has been under fire after the bodies of two whales, beached on the Kyles of Bute, were left lying for weeks after their deaths.

The local authority had undertaken to remove and dispose of the carcases of the Sowerby's beaked whales which became stranded on September 17 at Kames, near Tighnabruaich.

Kames Coastguard Rescue Team joined other agencies in an attempt to save the mammals, which were initially thought to be a mother and

After being contacted by the Argyllshire Advertiser, a council spokesperson said on Monday October 7: 'We apologise for the delay in removing the animals. A contractor has been appointed to carry out the work, which will be completed as soon as possible.

The animal which lay on the tank slip near Kames was removed on Wednesday October 9 for disposal at a landfill site, though it remains unclear whether both were uplifted. A post mortem examination carried out through the Scottish Marine Animal Strandings Scheme revealed that the 11-foot Motorists were advised to drive carefully on the roads in some parts of Argyll as recent flooding caused disruption.

A band of heavy rainfall overnight on October 5/6 across an area from south Kintyre and Islay to Mid Argyll forced the police to close many routes.

On the morning of Sunday October 6, Police Scotland reported its officers were working with the Scottish Fire and Rescue Service, BEAR Scotland and Argyll and Bute Council to deal with a number of weather-related incidents resulting in road closures due to flooding and landslides in Argyll.

On the east side of the Kintyre peninsula the B842 was closed for a time at Peninver following a landslide which was later cleared.

Extensive flooding was reported on roads around Campbeltown Airport, particularly the Moss Road which was closed between Stewarton and the airport entrance.

The low-lying section of the A816 near Lochgilphead between Meadows and Cairnbaan was also flooded. This main route to Oban was closed by police as a precaution and later re-opened.

Caution

Elsewhere, flooding was experienced on the Isle of Islay on roads including the Bowmore-Port Ellen route, while further north caution was advised on the A85 between Oban and Tyndrum due to debris on the road at Lochawe village.

Flooding remained a problem on Wednesday October 9, particularly along the B8025 to Tayvallich, near Glenyalvon as the changeable autumnal weather and heavy downpours continued.

Could you help build Argyll charity's future?

by Colin Cameron editor@argyllshireadvertiser.co.uk

Calling all joiners and builders out there.

One of Argyll's most popular charities needs some practical help in Lochgilphead.

As featured in the October 4 issue of the Argyllshire Advertiser, Mary's Meals is expanding in the town's Argyll Street.

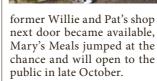

The Argyll-based charity feeds more than 1.5 million children in schools every single day across some of the world's poorest nations.

Such is the charity's popularity in Mid Argyll that it badly needed larger premises – so when the Mary's Meals would, though, rather spend donors' cash on feeding children than on expensive shop fittings and decor. So last week senior management from Glasgow donned overalls to paint the new Lochgilphead shop.

And to avoid diverting money from the charity's core purpose, they are now looking for help with sourcing and fitting a shop counter and shelving – it doesn't need to be fancy.

So, if anyone can help with materials or labour, any donations would be welcome.

How to spend £50 million? We should know by December

by Colin Cameron editor@argyllshireadvertiser.co.uk

The welcome has been warm across the political spectrum for the Rural Growth Deal for Argyll and Bute.

Work has been going on for the past three years by Argyll and Bute Council and partners to finalise a bid for a joint UK and Scottish government-funded scheme.

This came to fruition at the beginning of October with the announcement of a £50million Rural Growth Deal – with £25million each coming from the Scottish Government and Westminster.

It is hoped that spending priorities under the Rural Growth Deal can be agreed with the two governments by the end of this year.

The council's new policy lead for economic growth, Councillor Alastair Redman, hopes that the funding can further boost the 'huge success story' of the area's economy.

Councillor Redman said: 'This £50million investment from the UK and Scottish governments is very welcome indeed and much needed.

'There can be little doubt that our Argyll and Bute economy is a huge success story with key business sectors like food and drink. In particular our world-famous whisky and aquaculture industries, tourism, marine science, defence industries with a focus on engineering [are] all seeing the most potential for growth, but with this success comes many challenges.

'The main priorities for Argyll and Bute with this new investment will be transport and infrastructure, skills and education, digital connectivity, housing and our growing low carbon economy.

'While this investment will not resolve all of our constituency's challenges relating to economic growth it is certainly a welcome step in the correct direction.'

The local authority intends to make more of the area's natural and built resources and connect high value business sectors with international markets.

Council leader Councillor Aileen Morton added that the deal represented 'a transformational vote of confidence in the future of Argyll and Bute'.

Councillor Alastair Redman.

The deal has been well received by Mid Argyll and Kintyre and the Islands council members. Councillor Dougie Philand said: 'By providing attractive businesses, this should increase the skill base of our workforce to compete and retain staff which in turn will assist to keep people working and living in Argyll and Bute and assist future growth.

'This is an exciting initiative and thanks must go to the UK and Scottish governments and Scottish local authorities for having confidence to invest in Argyll and Bute.'

Councillor Anne Horn commented: 'I very much

She added one note of caution: 'At present I am without clarification whether any of the funding will be retained for Ministry of Defence plans for HMNB (Faslane) as this would impact on developing the priorities identified in the Rural Growth Deal bid.'

Councillor Donnie MacMillan added: 'This is great news for Argyll and Bute.

'We now need to agree priorities with the Scottish and UK governments and work with partners to develop detailed business cases. We will be exploring other sources of funding, so hopefully the total investment will work out much greater than the £50 million announced.'

'Officers have worked really hard with others to get to this stage and I very much welcome the announcement,' said Councillor Robin Currie.

'Hopefully investment will be made in attracting more people to come to live in Argyll and Bute and for the people who remain or come to this area, that there are improvements in essential infrastructure, roads, transport, connectivity, housing and businesses.'

Argyll and Bute MSP Michael Russell said he was am delighted to see the deal come to fruition, having been 'in at the beginning' of the plans.

He said: 'It is a unique opportunity for major improvements that will help every community and every resident in Argyll and Bute. I hope the necessary plans can be speeded up to allow money to start to flow as early as next year because the sooner we all

Deal or grow deal

I don't know why, but we are mildly (and pleasantly) surprised at the level of political agreement over the Rural Growth Deal.

The council, seemingly, got less money than it was asking for – but in cash per head terms we did quite well in comparison to other rural or City Deals.

It will be interesting to see what additional investment can be attracted to bolster the £50 million pot.

Farmers and fishermen face Brexit 'ruin'

Sir, In the House of Commons last week I accused the prime minister of viewing my hard-working Argyll and Bute constituents as simply 'expendable'.

And I warned him that his 'new' plan for Brexit; the one in which Northern Ireland retains free and unfettered access to the European Single Market would leave Argyll and Bute's farmers and shellfish producers facing financial ruin.

I know that for almost 40 years our shellfish producers and hill farmers have built up sophisticated trade links with the European Union, with our world-renowned seafood in particular, being taken from our seas and delivered fresh to some of the best restaurants right across Europe.

I know that any form of Brexit will be deeply damaging to Scotland but a Brexit deal in which Northern Ireland, just 12 miles across the water, will be given a massive competitive commercial advantage over Argyll and Bute food producers is completely unacceptable.

As I said to the Prime Minister, surely if this deal is good enough for Northern Ireland, it is good enough for Scotland. Sadly, however, he appeared uninterested in the fate of this already fragile rural economy, and refused to even consider the effect of this disastrous policy on our communities

With the true extent of the damage Brexit will cause here in Argyll and Bute becoming clearer every day, today I forwarded to Mr Johnson an e-mail I received from one west coast fisherman who wrote desperately seeking clarification on these new proposals, and who signed off his correspondence from soon-to-be-unemployed and bankrupt fisherman'.

This is the reality for too many people in Argyll and Bute but it is a reality the prime minister is not interested in.

Better health and social care integration

Older patients stuck in hospital beds in Scotland as a result of delayed discharge are effectively ageing 30 years in just three weeks, a new Scottish Parliament Health and Sport Committee has warned.

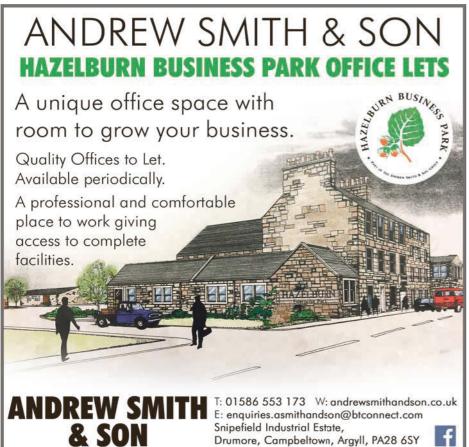

The report looks ahead to the Scottish Government's 2020-21 budget and highlights the significant extra costs of keeping patients in hospital longer than they need to be there compared to intermediate care, care homes or home care.

Keeping older patients in hospital when they are ready to be discharged is seriously damaging to their health and more investment is needed in our social care system, so that every older person can swiftly access the care they need and are entitled to. New evidence provided by the Scottish Government to the committee has also revealed that delayed discharges also cost the NHS an average of £234

Older people tell us they are afraid of going into hospital in case they never leave and spending time in hospital unnecessarily can put patients at greater risk of infection and mobility loss.

It can also have a severe impact on their mental health, increasing the risk of loneliness and isolation.

We urgently need more recruitment and intensive investment in health and social care, and much better integration between services.

Parents wrongly criminalised

Sir

The Scottish Conservatives have rightfully voted against a recent bill that could see loving parents wrongly criminalised. No-one wants to see violence against children but the smacking bill is not the answer.

It makes the law less clear and increases the chance that normal parents are wrongly accused of harming their child.

We in the Scottish Conservatives would rather help and support families than bring in bad law that could turn children against their parents.

This is yet another case of the separatists' Orwellian over-reaching and their constant imposing on everyday family life, just like their failed Named Person policy.

BRIDGING THE RETIREMENT GAP

Ever-increasing life expectancy means larger retirement pots are now needed. This means the ageold practice of stopping work at 65 is being replaced by phased retirement; many are reducing hours or responsibility, but extending their working lives by several more years, bringing with it a host of new financial considerations.

So, for the generation now contemplating retirement, the trick is to plan ahead so that pension provision meets both your financial needs and wider hopes for personal fulfilment. Contact us for further information.

Raymond bids farewell – but he's open to offers

by Colin Cameron editor@argyllshireadvertiser.co.uk

A well-known figure in Mid Argyll, particularly in youth development circles, is taking a well-earned break as retirement beckons.

A reception was held in honour of Raymond Flanagan, youth worker for Mid Argyll with Argyll and Bute Council, as he stepped down from a role he has held for the past 17 years.

Tables groaned with food prepared by youth volunteers, and by Raymond himself, as guests arrived.

Speaking at the 'do' in Lochgilphead Community Centre on Friday October 4, Martin Turnbull, the council's community learning manager said: 'Raymond very quickly became an important part of the team after joining in 2002. Everybody knows Raymond and everyone has had support from him as well as a bit of wind-up at times.

'But if Raymond is known for anything, it's for tablet, football and his enthusiasm for Lego.'

He continued: 'We are genuinely sorry to see you go, and we wish you all the best for the future, and hope you have plenty of time to make us some tablet – drop in any time – to go and see Celtic, play a bit of golf and get into the Lego.'

Colleagues and youth volunteers presented Raymond with a bonsai tree and a tea mug with stirring spoon, while the council handed over an inscribed quaich to Speaking afterwards he said, in a more serious vein: 'I'll miss my colleagues and I'll miss all the kids, and I'll miss working with Mid Argyll Youth Forum. And that's it basically.

'But I'm also looking forward to new chapters. I have plenty to keep me going with golf and everything else.'

Raymond added, perhaps not entirely seriously: 'I don't turn 60 until December, so I'm open to offers!'

Care savings proposal is a cause for concern

Concerns have been raised over proposals put before health chiefs to restrict care packages for older people in Argyll and Bute.

A possible move to limit packages to patients with 'top priority concerns' was one of a number of ideas proposed as part of a financial recovery plan by Argyll and Bute Health and Social Care Partnership (HSCP).

A report which was put before the HSCP's integrated joint board (IJB) presented a total of 13 savings options which would save a total of £386,000 if they were all implemented.

The proposal which generated most controversy was worded: 'New care packages for older people's services restricted to those with critical priority 1 needs only, with lower priorities signposted to alternative third sector services and/or assisted with telecare services where possible.

'Aim is to contain spend on new care packages to no more than 30 per cent of funding released from any care packages terminating.

'Where that allows, some of the highest priority 2 cases will also be accommodated.'

Dr Angus MacTaggart, a GP representative for the HSCP, who practises on Islay spoke out against the plans for care packages: 'I would like to voice significant concerns relating to the proposed changes to home care.

"The proposed restrictions on funding are draconian, short sighted and discriminatory, and at odds with our aims.

'For example, [it will affect] those with severe and enduring mental health issues, or those with significant difficulty with daily living routines, or those with terminal illnesses or who have recently been discharged from hospital.

'If approved today, this policy will have significant consequences on how we function as an organisation whose objective is to provide compassionate healthcare.

'It will lead to severe bed pressures in hospitals. It is clear that this policy has not been fully risk assessed and will lead to real and significant harm.'

Respect

Councillor Kieron Green, chairman of the IJB, said: 'We respect the professional opinion which you have given and have discussed this on the morning of this meeting.

'Even if we approved all these savings, it is likely that we would have to consider bringing forward more savings in the future.

'I think that bearing in mind the professional advice we are being given, I would be minded to say that for this particular item, officers need to go back.

'If it is possible to deliver any aspect of this saving, bring it back to a future meeting of the IJB.'

Betty Rhodick, a public representative on the IJB, said: 'If you are going to have people going back into hospital through a lack of care, you are talking about us – the public.

'We need to get it right in cutting services, and care is not the way to go. Speculate to accumulate and we will end up saving money.'

Councillor Gary Mulvaney, who is part of the finance and policy committee of the IJB, said: 'I can certainly accept your suggestion that we have a further look at this, but what I would say is that those who wrote this paper are professionals.

'We will look at it again in a month's time, assess the risks and see where it takes us.'

The proposal will be revisited at the board's next scheduled meeting on Wednesday November 27.

Alarm over US whisky tariff

News that the United States plans to slap tariffs of 25 per cent on imports of Scottish malt whisky has been met with concern and disappointment in Argyll.

More than £1 billion worth of Scotch whisky was exported to the US last year and there is concern the new tariff, which comes into force on October 18, could impact that.

Highlands and Islands Conservative MSP Donald Cameron said he is 'alarmed' that such a trade dispute could hit communities in places such as Islay very hard.

'It's a bitter irony that an argument between the European Union and the United States about subsidies for airliners should embroil the malt whisky industry,' he said.

'EU trade negotiators need to get back into talks with their American counterparts and sort this dispute out before it does any more harm.'

Neil MacKay, chairman of Oban and Lorn Tourism Alliance, said: 'Twenty-five per cent is a really major sum and it is verging on extortionate. We are very lucky that the Oban Distillery is a wonderful resource in our town and a very popular one. This could really affect business for the Oban Distillery.'

However, Mr MacKay's concern did not end with Oban. He added: 'For Argyll and the Isles, whisky is a vital, vital part of the economy. The distilleries are phenomenal. Is it a matter of time until they start doing the same with the likes of gin, which has had a boost in the last few years, with nearly every island having its own gin? It could have some long-term effects.'

Karen Betts, chief executive of the Scotch Whisky Association, said: 'This is a blow to the Scotch whisky industry. The tariff will undoubtedly damage the Scotch whisky sector. The US is our largest and most valuable single market.

'The tariff will put our competitiveness and Scotch whisky's market share at risk. We are also concerned that it will disproportionately impact smaller producers. We expect to see a negative impact on investment and job creation in Scotland, and longer term impacts on productivity and growth across the industry and our supply chain.'

Morag is new HIE area manager

Morag Goodfellow has been appointed area manager for Highlands and Islands Enterprise (HIE) in Argyll and the Islands.

Morag joined HIE in 2009 and has been based within the Argyll and the Islands team for the past nine years, most recently as head of regional development, based in Lochgilphead.

She has played a key role in developing some of Argyll's recent infrastructure projects such as The Fairmile Building business hub in Dunoon and the European Marine Science Park in Oban.

Originally from Caithness, Morag studied economics at Glasgow University.

She completed a master's degree in land economy before embarking on a career as a chartered surveyor, working in Edinburgh, Glasgow and Oban.

She said: 'I am delighted to be taking up this role, leading the Argyll and the Islands team.

'I am very fortunate to live and work in such a beautiful Morag Goodfellow.

region, which has so many natural benefits to help drive our economy.

'From tourism to whisky, aquaculture to marine science, there are significant opportunities for growth and innovation in all these sectors. There are also challenges of course, including helping businesses adapt to leaving the EU and attracting new talent to areas still experiencing population declines.

'I look forward to continuing to work with the team and our partners, including Argyll and Bute Council and North Ayrshire Council. Collaboration is the most effective means of strengthening the economy and community resilience of Argyll and the İslands.'

Scottish Water calls for money-saving efficiency

Using the Scottish Government's climate week, Scottish Water is taking the opportunity to call on more people to reduce their daily water usage.

It has been confirmed that around 80 million litres of water have been saved across Scotland in the past year after water efficiency advice and devices were given to thousands of households.

The reduction in water consumption is enough to fill 32 Olympic-size swimming pools or 53 million kettles.

Scottish Water has been working in partnership with the Energy Saving Trust and Home Energy Scotland, promoting water efficiency to help households save water, energy and money and the latest figures show it is working.

This summer, Home Energy Scotland has been at events throughout the country giving communities water efficiency advice and distributing water saving devices to 30,000 households so far.

As a result of these measures it is estimated that the saving of 80 million litres of water could equate to a carbon footprint reduction of about 240 tonnes of C02 equivalent – enough to heat almost 90 houses for a year. These new figures have prompted Scottish Water to renew its call for more people to use water wisely and take simple measures, such as taking shorter showers or boiling only the water you need in a kettle.

The more people do this, the further water supplies will go and this will leave more in rivers, lochs and reservoirs and so help the environment.

Brian McCarthy, Scottish Water's reservoirs and supply demand manager, said: 'These new figures show that a massive amount of water has been saved by people across Scotland after we have issued great water efficiency advice and provided devices such as shower timers and tap aerators to thousands of households.

'We would urge everyone to do what they can to reduce consumption of this precious resource and in turn help the environment and save money through reduced energy bills.'

Water use accounts for six per cent of UK carbon emissions, which is the same as the aviation industry. One per cent of this is from collecting, treating and pumping drinking water to homes.

A huge amount of energy goes into making tap water safe to drink and Scottish Water is one of the largest single users of electricity in Scotland.

The remaining five per cent is from heating water in the home, with around one fifth of household heating bills spent on heating water. By using water wisely, a family of four can save 0.7 tonnes of CO2 and more than £100 in reduced energy bills each year.

A modern epidemic in sight

An epidemic of short-sightedness, or myopia, is sweeping the world.

The problem was first noticed in East Asia, where now up to 96 per cent of teenagers are short-sighted. In Europe and US, this figure is around 50 per cent compared with 25 per cent 50 years ago.

Estimates suggest that very soon 2.5 billion people, that is a third of the world's population, will be myopic.

Babies' eyes grow rapidly, reaching near-adult size by 10 years of age. Myopia results when this growth is altered and the eyeball is elongated. This causes the lens' focus to be shifted from the retina to slightly in front of it, resulting in blurred vision. Although vision can be corrected with glasses, contact lenses or surgery, it increases risk of eye diseases – retinal detachment, glaucoma and cataracts – in later life.

So what is the cause of the myopia epidemic and how can it be prevented?

For years, myopia was claimed to be a genetic problem, but to account for the recent dramatic rise there must be additional environmental factors

As this rise coincided with Asian children spending more time studying (15-year-olds in Shanghai have on average 14 hours per week of homework), and most children, irrespective of nationality, poring over smartphone and computer screens, too much close-up work seemed the obvious answer.

Some experts still back this theory, but several large comparative studies on children's daily routines do not. Instead, the only environmental risk factor uncovered by these studies is lack of time spent outdoors. The results show that children who spent less time outdoors have a greater risk of myopia regardless of time spent studying. The key to protection from myopia seems to be the eye's exposure to bright light.

The scientific reasoning behind this finding is unknown, although animal experiments suggest that a deficiency of light-stimulated chemicals in the retina can block normal eye development.

Whatever the fault, prevention is not difficult to devise – send the children outside for more sunlight, more physical activity and overall a more healthy existence.

Porridge Day is oatly delicious

With a change in temperature, it seems like a fitting time to fill up on a warm breakfast and celebrate World Porridge Day, writes Rachel Carruthers.

Volunteers at the Lochgilphead Mary's Meals shop joined in the worldwide fun, topping their porridge with fruity faces yesterday (Thursday October 10).

Now feeding more than 1.5 million children in 18 countries around the world,

Mary's Meals sets up school feeding programmes in some of the world's poorest nations. The food attracts children into the classroom, where they receive an education that can, in the future, be their ladder out of poverty.

World Porridge Day was launched in 2009 by the charity to celebrate the difference the daily meals they provide to chronically hungry children makes.

Karen Gray, UK director of communications and fundraising at Mary's Meals, said: 'We celebrate World Porridge Day because it is a mug of vitamin-enriched maize porridge that Mary's Meals serves to thousands of children every school day in countries, including Malawi, Zambia and Liberia.'

The charity is also asking people to post, tag and share their #PorridgeSmiles to help raise awareness of its life-changing work.

WHAT'S ON IN MID ARGYLL CONTROL CONTR

Himmerland will spread happiness in Tayvallich Village Hall.

Great Danes invade Tayvallich to spread warmth

Tayvallich is set for a Viking invasion when Danish band Himmerland play the village hall.

Himmerland are five experienced musicians, inspired by varied cultures, who perform music from their own country and beyond.

Named after the home area of founder Eskil Romme, Himmerland cast their musical net wide, from Ireland to Africa and Eastern Europe and even samba. Their mix of roots music crosses styles, cultures and frontiers. Since forming in 2010, Himmerland have toured internationally with great success, including a collaboration with Scots performer Mairi Campbell, who brought her show Auld Lang Syne to Tayvallich earlier this year. Along the way, the band have recorded award-nominated albums.

Cultural life

The band members span a range of ages and backgrounds. Eskil is an organic farmer who plays saxophone and composes music. He is closely involved in Danish cultural life and hosts a boutique festival every June, the Halkær Festival, to celebrate 'Nordic, Celtic and organic cultures, independence and the environment'.

Jens Ulvsand on bouzouki and vocals has been an integral part of the Swedish folk music scene for the last 25 years. Percussionist Ayi Solomon is from Ghana, while Jonas Lærke Clausen on violin and vocals and Emil Ringtved on electric bass and vocals are part of the upcoming generation of skilled young Danish musicians who blend traditional music with modern influences.

Diverse

Gathering material for the band's repertoire is a challenging but rewarding process as five diverse musicians find what they call their 'shared soul'.

Wherever they play, Himmerland spread warmth and happiness with their unique blend of traditional Danish ballads, whirling fiddle tunes, stunning improvisations and exciting new music composed and arranged by band members.

Himmerland will play Tayvallich Village Hall on Saturday October 12 starting at 8pm (doors open 7.30pm). Tickets are £12 or £5 for under 16s. Pay at the door or email info.tayvhall@gmail.com to book tickets. The venue is unlicensed but people are welcome to BYOB.

Many Argyll people oppose the plan for pylons close to Tarbert which, they say, will ruin the village's scenic beauty at a stroke.

Cowal Highland Gathering shortlisted for two awards

The Argyll event billed as 'the world's most spectacular Highland gathering' has been shortlisted in two of the UK's most prestigious tourism awards.

Cowal Highland Gathering is the only Scottish finalist in the National Outdoor Events Association Awards (NOEA) Large Festival of the Year category. Now in its 16th year, the awards bring together the very best of the UK's events and festivals, all vying for industry recognition by winning.

This news came hot on the heels of the announcement that the gathering is one of only three finalists in the Best Cultural Event or Festival in the Highlands and Islands Tourism Awards (HITA). These awards - now in their 15th year - celebrate the best in the hospitality, cultural events, festivals and tourism industry in the Highlands and Islands.

'These are two prominent organisations, so thrilled to have been shortlisted by both,' he said.

Argyll life and history through the lens

Inveraray History Society opened its new season with an excellent and entertaining presentation by David Fiddes of Strathlachlan.

On the evening of Tuesday October 1, David presented audio visual sequences of four facets of Argyll life which he had photographed – featuring his early life at Glendaruel, Dunderave Castle from dereliction to renovation, St Conan's Church, Loch Awe and Argyll castles and stately houses, some of which have been renovated and are open to the public.

The accompanying music and commentary lent an atmosphere of history and pride in Argyll, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large attendance.

The next meeting on November 5 will focus on First World War battlefields in France and Belgium and will be presented by Kenny Stewart.

This will include information on where some local servicemen are commemorated. Anyone is welcome to go along.

And the Gaelic Year goes to...

The Donald Meek Award 2019 for the Gaelic Book of the Year has been presented to the writer Donald Urquhart for Turas (Journey), his debut collection of poetry.

The presentation took place at a ceremony at the National Piping Centre in Glasgow on Thursday September 26. This is the first time that the foremost prize for Gaelic writing has been awarded to a collection of original unpublished poetry.

Additional funding from Bord na Gàidhlig has allowed the competition to broaden in recent years, and two other authors were also awarded prizes.

Well-known poet Myles Campbell was in second place with Gràs, a collection of religious poems to be launched by Handsel Press at the Royal National Mòd in Glasgow this month, while Morag Ann MacNeil was awarded third prize for her children's story, Artair sa Chaisteal.

Alison Lang, Director of the Gaelic

Books Council, said: 'It gives us great pleasure to be able to recognise the talents of the writers who have received this year's awards, and we are grateful to our funders and to all those who support the Gaelic Books Council. Congratulations to John, Myles and Morag Ann; we look forward to seeing their books in print.'

Following the award, John Urquhart said: 'Without a doubt, this is the greatest honour of my life as a writer. I am delighted and especially thankful to the judges for such recognition for my book, Turas – a poetic look at my life experiences, along with a few thoughts on the twists and turns of the world.'

The Donald Meek Award was established in 2010 by the Gaelic Books Council, in collaboration with Creative Scotland, with a view to encouraging new and established Gaelic writers. This year's entries included poetry, children's fiction and academic research.

Book of the Review: Voices of Scotswomen in Peace and War

The sub-title of this book is 'spoken recollections of home life, employment and 1939-45 war service'.

It is the latest in an impressive series of oral histories by Ian MacDougall.

It chronicles the experiences of 19 women, born between 1918 and 1926, who joined the ATS, WAAF, WRNS and the Timber Corps during the Second World War.

Their unique stories make for fascinating reading. Many in Argyll will have known the redoubtable Margaret Harris, née Campbell, from Taynuilt, who died in 2014.

She gained a commission in the WRNS and eventually sailed as a cipher operator on the requisitioned liner Ile de France to New York. She probably speaks for the other women when she said that 'these years were the central experience of my life'.

Like Margaret, all faced the subsequent challenges and tribulations of post-war life and their stories tell much about the history of Scotland in these years.

The stories describe the trauma of near-death wartime experiences, the loss of close friends and the excitement offered by new challenges.

The lives described in the book also represent a valuable contribution to the history of work, education, housing and family life in a changing Scotland.

Ian MacDougall has done a splendid job in making such stories readable for everyone as if they had been written by family members which, of course, all the women ultimately were.

Young farmers give cancer the kick

In fields across Scotland bale sculptures are mysteriously popping up.

The striking creations mark the return of the Scottish Association of Young Farmers national bale art competition. There was no theme this year but a requirement to raise awareness of a cancer charity.

For the first time Mid Argyll Young Farmers have taken to their forklifts and dug out their paint brushes to enter the bale art competition.

Inspired by the Rugby World Cup in Japan and wanting to show their support for the Scotland team, the young farmers constructed a kicker, ball and rugby post from round and square bales of hay and haylage. Choosing to support the Mid Argyll Marie Curie Fundraising Group, the young farmers have also displayed a banner, kindly donated by the charity, alongside their sculpture.

The hope is that if passers by have enjoyed the spectacle they will show their appreciation by donating to Marie Curie, a charity which provides care and support to those with terminal illnesses.

Wishing to grow in numbers Mid Argyll Young Farmers Club hopes the show of artistic skills will also encourage new members to join.

If anyone would like to join please visit their Facebook page: www.facebook.com/midargyllyfc

ROTHESAY

Pavilion opening to be extended

The opening date for Rothesay Pavilion looks set to be extended until April next year, according to a report that went before councillors.

The £14million project to restore the Grade A listed building is nearing completion but the charity which will take over its running has asked Argyll and Bute Council for further funding.

The Rothesay Pavilion Charity [RPC] fears that there is a revenue funding shortfall for the first two years of the five-year operating period from 2020/21 to 2024/25.

A report, discussed at a full council meeting on Thursday September 26, stated that the 'revenue grant' to be paid by the council to RPC has been agreed at £150,000 per year for the first five years, but other details were being kept confidential.

Councillor Gary Mulvaney, the council's depute leader and its policy lead for strategic finance and capital regeneration projects, has admitted that the project has been 'both complex and challenging.

The building was due to be handed over in September 2019.

The project aims to get as many parks as possible working to conserve Britain's bees.

Thought for the Week with Marilyn Shedden

They rise from the mist in an almost audible silence and have stood guard in the Glen since around 3,000 BC.

The famous Standing Stones at Kilmartin have an amazing story to tell, if we just knew how to listen.

Why did our ancestors build these wondrous vertical monuments? Why is there such amazing inter-connectedness between the standing stones throughout the United Kingdom and Europe? What is their significance? What is the meaning behind the stones? Why are they positioned to monitor the summer and winter solstice? What did the people who went before us want to tell us?

The song of their beginnings seems to whisper across the grasses. Let us now go on a wee bit further to Achnabreac and pause to wonder at the cup and ring marks there, which are the most extensive set of cup and ring marked rocks in Britain.

These are the latest works of prehistoric art to be discovered in Argyll, and are reckoned to be around 5,000 years old. But what do they mean?

The people who made their mark on the land would have lived, loved, danced, mourned, farmed, hunted, played and prayed.....just like us.

The mist hangs over them holding its quiet secret. I don't know what the story is, but I do know that I'm part of it. I don't know what clues the burial cairns hold, but I do know that I long to find out. I don't know what hands shaped and carved the markings, or how they lifted the standing stones, but I do know that somehow it is important.

I do know there is wonder in it all, and where there is wonder....there is God.

Sean invades Islay for Big Scottish Breakfast

STV weather presenter Sean Batty made a flying visit to Islay, taking part in fundraising events for the Big Scottish Breakfast, an annual STV Children's Appeal fundraising event.

Packing as much into a day as he could, Sean's first stop was the Port Mor Community Café, Port Charlotte where he enjoyed a cuppa and a chat with the staff on Tuesday October 1, before heading to the Argyll College campus in Bowmore to meet members of Islay Youth Action.

Sean then joined parents and children at Bowmore Primary School for some maths based activities before doing what he does best and presenting a weather forecast with the children.

Bid to save Campbeltown Creamery gets mooving

A group of 29 Kintyre dairy farmers have launched a bid, and associated crowd-funding campaign, to save Campbeltown Creamery, producers of the world-famous Mull of Kintyre cheddar.

Nestled on the southern tip of the Kintyre peninsula within a climate that ensures all-year grass growth for the dairy herds which graze there, Campbeltown Creamery has been producing cheese using the finest milk from the 29 farms in the area, since 1923 and making award-winning Mull of Kintyre cheddar since the 1970s.

Those 29 farms, all modern, committed and family-owned, have launched their campaign to purchase the creamery and the Mull of Kintyre cheddar brand from current owners First Milk. The group, the Mull of Kintyre Milk Supply Cooperative, will fund the purchase through use of a levy from every litre of milk produced, in addition to external funding which is currently being sought.

A key element of the funding is the launch of the crowdfunding campaign which seeks to raise £50,000 towards the purchase. The group is encouraging the community, foodies, suppliers, customers, businesses and anyone with a love of cheese to contribute and further information can be found at www.crowdfunder. co.uk/mokcheddar

In 2018 First Milk, a British farmer-owned dairy co-operative, announced plans to sell Campbeltown Creamery as part of a move away from smaller-scale brands. This created an opportunity for a Kintyre farmer-led buy-out, aimed at saving the creamery and securing its future and the positive impact it has upon the area.

The dairy farming sector in the Kintyre Peninsula and nearby Gigha contributes £3.2m per annum to the local economy. In turn, when additional upstream impacts are considered, a further £2.55m is added. The dairy sector in the area provides 117 jobs directly on farm and a further 49 indirectly across Kintyre.

Dairy farmer Thomas Cameron said: 'We are currently facing a huge and exciting opportunity with a clear mission – to secure the future of the Campbeltown Creamery for the benefit of the Kintyre community. We will also be in a position to save a well-known brand and contribute to Scotland's reputation as a Land of Food and Drink.

Award-winning

'Mull of Kintyre cheddar is said to be enhanced by the Angel's Share of whisky that remains in the creamery building from its past life as a distillery. The multi-award-winning cheese is made with milk that all comes from within a 15-mile radius and from farms that are committed to securing their land for future generations and to contributing to the local economy.

'Dairy farms in the area need the creamery in order to thrive and the creamery needs us. Given the challenges of sustaining a vibrant economy in this remote part of Scotland, the role of the dairy sector in Kintyre is fundamental to its success.

'Our farmers are young, enthusiastic, committed to sustainability, investment and the next generation and have strong integrity – they are just the right group of people to secure this deal.

'We have produced a great video which shows just why the Campbeltown Creamery is so pivotal to the area and why Mull of Kintyre cheddar is so important to Scotland and I encourage everyone to please support us by heading to the crowdfund website and spreading the word.'

NFU Scotland Milk

Committee chairman John Smith commented: 'This is a bold and inspiring bid from producers in Kintyre to preserve their creamery and to continue making world-famous, award-winning Mull of Kintyre cheddar.

'These hard working family farms have built their businesses with a view to continuing to milk cows; building and promoting the Mull of Kintyre brand locally and nationally and are looking positively to the future.

'Dairy farmers in Kintyre have a fantastic story to tell, producing high quality grass-fed milk in a beautiful part of the country. Funders will take the Mull of Kintyre brand to the next level by getting behind a cheese that has real provenance.'

Camanachd defeat seals relegation for Inveraray

Oban Camanachd Inveraray

Mowi Premiership

Inveraray lost out to the Camanachd Cup finalists at Mossfield in Oban - a result which means the Royal Burgh side will be playing its shinty in the National Division next season.

In goal for Inveraray for the match on Saturday October 5, Scott MacLachlan was on form and he denied Oban Camanachd's Daniel MacCuish, Daniel MacVicar and Andrew MacCuish, before play switched to the other end and it was Inveraray who took the lead on 24 minutes. John Kennedy played the ball between the penalty spot and the D where Allan MacDonald let the ball run across his body before turning and blasting home, giving Cameron Sutherland no chance in the Oban goal.

There were harsh words in the Oban Camanachd dressing room at half-time and a revamp saw Keith MacMillan replace Gary McKerracher whilst the forward line switched to a three-one formation with Andrew MacCuish on the D.

The switches paid dividends when the home side drew level just four minutes into the second half when Daniel MacCuish ran forward and Daniel MacVicar volleved the ball into the net to make Oban Camanachd took the lead on 58 minutes when Andrew MacCuish's turn and shot flew past the keeper.

Just a couple of minutes later, Andrew MacCuish turned provider as he found Scott MacMillan who finished with a low drive from the left although his effort may have taken a slight deflection.

Two of the game's best young goalkeepers were on show, and Inveraray's Scott MacLachlan saved his side from a bigger defeat though Oban Camanachd did have to rely on Cameron Sutherland, who made good saves near the end from Garry MacPherson and Allan MacDonald.

The for Oban win Camanachd means that they and Kyles are the only sides, other than championship favourites Kingussie, in the title race as the season moves into the closing stages.
